First Wedding Ceremony at Museum!!

For the first time in its 122 year history, the 1889 Cedarville School — now the village museum — on Sunday, September 4, opened its doors to wedding guests rather than students.

At 1 p.m. under warm blue skies more than 150 people of all ages filled the white folding chairs arranged in a semi-circle on the east lawn of the museum to hear Betsy Vondran and Greg Gilpin exchange their vows. The parents of the couple, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Vondran of Rockton and Mr. and Mrs. Hal Gilpin of Elizabeth, were in the front row.

Many of the couple’s other relatives live in Stephenson County and were in attendance.

For Betsy, who chose the wedding site, it was a bit of a homecoming because, she said, for many years the former school building was the scene of family reunions. Greg also has ties to the building: his grandfather is president of the Cedarville Area Historical Society and Museum.

The wedding ceremony began when the first participants left the building through the museum's east double doors and descended the concrete steps toward the rose arbor that on Sunday served as the altar. The wedding party crossed 75 feet of lawn that as late as the 1960s served as the school’s playground area. The ceremony ended as the wedding party returned to the building through the same east doors.

Although no records are known to exist, one museum board member commented that probably no other Illinois museum of Cedarville’s small size has ever hosted a wedding.

Museum Welcomes 45 State AAUW Members

Forty-five Illinois members of the American Association of University Women gathered Saturday, September 17, at the Cedarville Museum to celebrate the 151st birthday of Cedarville’s Jane Addams, a charter member of the AAUW Chicago branch.

The women participated in a self-guided tour of the museum and a 45-minute discussion about Miss Addams, led by CAHS President Jim Bode and Paul Fry, and enjoyed a birthday cake and buffet lunch prepared by Cedarville’s Mr. and Mrs. Don Heilman. Fry is the last surviving pallbearer of the 1935 Jane Addams funeral.

Later the women drove to the Cedarville Cemetery and placed a wreath on the grave of Miss Addams and sang “America the Beautiful.”

The AAUW was founded in 1881 by a group of women college graduates to promote equal opportunities and increased educational prospects for women. Today it is a national organization of 100,000 men and women. The September 17 attendees included women from Springfield, Rockford, Elgin, Crystal Lake, Aurora and Hinsdale areas.

Whether you were an early morning runner or walker on the Jane Addams Trail or a visitor to the Cedarville Museum, you were in for a treat during the eighth annual Jane Addams Festival. This year the Cedarville Area Historical Society event celebrated the 151st birthday of Miss Addams, a native of Cedarville who founded Chicago’s Hull-House and was the first American woman to win the Nobel Peace Prize. If you missed this year, make sure you plan to attend next September.

Museum Closes Oct. 30, But Historical Society Activities Go On, On

The doors of the Cedarville Museum will close for the 2011 season at 4 p.m. Saturday, October 30, but the work of its parent organization — the Cedarville Area Historical Society — never stops.

The nine member society board of directors will continue to meet the second Tuesday evening of every month to guide the future of the society and the museum.

Board members are Jim Bade, Narcissa Engle, Galen Bertram, Sharon Barnone, Carol Meyers, Steve Myers, Diane Hagemann, Diane Tepper and Dale Prieve. If you have any suggestions or thoughts for 2012, feel free to contact one of them.

Although the museum will not be re-open until May 1 of 2012, every effort will be made to honor special requests for groups that would like to view the exhibits and for persons who would like to make use of the research center. Call Jim Bade at 815-563-4485.

In 2011 the museum made its facilities available for use for special purposes. For example, the museum was the scene of an outdoor wedding attended by more than 150 and was host to a meeting and catered lunch by 45 members of the American Association of University Women. Call Jim Bade for more information about 2012 possibilities.
