Suzanne Crandall’s Jane Addams Is Series Finale on September 15

Rockford actress Suzanne Crandall will star September 15 at the Cedarville Museum in the first person presentation of the life of Jane Addams, Cedarville native who founded Chicago’s famous Hull-House, the country’s first settlement facility.

The performance starts at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $7 at the door. Free refreshments will follow the 45 minute program.

The Addams program is Crandall’s third in the series of presentations highlighting the three local area women — Ellen Gates Starr, Julia Lathrop and Addams who were involved in early Hull-House.

From Little Comments Big Stories Grow

By Jim Bade

Years ago, most newspapers featured “neighborhood” columns with news about local persons involved in events that had nothing to do with the end of the world. Very few papers do that today.

As an historian, I have always found these journalism exercises interesting because they generally reflect the lives of the “common man” at that time.

I bring this up because the historical society has begun collecting and electronically storing these columns and other small newspaper tidbits related to Cedarville and its residents. Ladora Wardlow, a society member, has done much of the research for this project.

I want to share with you a few items Ladora found from the year 1900, a year when the population of Cedarville was slightly more than 200. To bring the persons involved in the story closer to you, I will add information about them that is not in the original story.

On January 2, the Freeport Daily Bulletin reported that “Prof. Fackler took charge as principal of the village schools.” Little did O. A. Fackler know at that time that he would be an educational fixture and resident of Cedarville for at least the next ten years.

O. A. Fackler, 1904

In 1900 the only village school was the building on the hill that now houses the Cedarville Museum. Fackler had the distinction of witnessing the graduation of the school’s first two-year-high school class on June 13, 1903. The five graduates were J. Harry Angle, Paul L. Frank, Maude Moses, Roy D. Cromley and Harry H. Addams. (Any ancestors here?) The class colors were light pink and green. (Lights) Fackler was also principal in 1909 when parents gave the school the Abraham Lincoln bust that is now exhibited in the museum. The gift was in honor of Lincoln’s 100th birthday. No information on the bust’s cost.

We also learn in that issue of the Freeport Daily Bulletin that farmer William Clingman lost 35 hogs by cholera “and the end is not in sight.” William Leid has sold his residence to Henry Hockman and “William Bruce is somewhat better but is still confined to his room.”

In 1900 William Clingman, a widower for eleven years, was alone and farming the Clingman 1843 homestead on the east side of what is now Illinois Highway 26 immediately north of Angle Road. The house is still there. His mother left the farm with her daughter Eliza in 1874 and moved to 280 Mill Street. In 1900 Mr. and Mrs. Roeben Siegfried, parents of William’s late wife, lived next to the two women. Roeben was a close friend and business associate of John Addams.

In May, Hockman, a Civil War veteran, was named chairman of the village committee planning the 1900 celebration of what we now call Memorial Day and in September he attended the Grand Army of the Republic encampment in Chicago. Hockman died in 1917. (The historical society has 46 years of the minutes of the Cedarville Memorial Day Committee in the event you are interested in knowing who served on Hockman’s committee.)

William (Billy) Bruce, born in Ireland in 1827, came to the United States in 1856. Bruce was married twice and had one son by his first wife. He moved to Cedarville in 1881 and purchased the house on the southeast corner of Mill and Second streets.

He recovered in several weeks from whatever ailed him in this story, but he died in 1909. One of his pallbearers was William Clingman. Bruce’s widow, the former Sarah Lutts, whom he married in 1864, died in 1925 at the age of 95.

Bruce home on Mill and Second streets at the time he lived there.

On January 10 the Freeport Daily Bulletin reported “the ice harvest is over. All the ice houses have been filled with a fine quality of ice.” The life of the ice was extended by insulating it with straw. The late LeRoy Wilson several years ago confirmed what I had always suspected: the ice was cut from Cedar Creek. He added: “Probably from the same area of the creek where the cows had wandered all summer.” (I have no record of any Cedarville deaths or even sickness from contact with this ice.)

On January 19 the Freeport Daily Bulletin announced that the remains of Mrs. Lizzie Addams Tilton, 39, arrived in Cedarville from Cedar Bluff, Ky., where she died. She was the daughter of James Addams, uncle of Jane Addams, also 39. (Turn to page 5)
Two Programs Twice as Nice

In August the historical society presented the first two of four programs spotlighting Jane Addams, Ellen Gates Starr and Julia Lathrop, three local area women who were instrumental in the birth and success of Chicago’s Hull-House. On the left page are some who attended Highland College history instructor Andy Dvorak’s August 4 introductory presentation; on the right are some who heard Rockford’s Suzanne Crandall’s first person story of the life of Ellen Gates Starr from Durand.

Let’s run!
February 13, Freeport Daily Bulletin: "The will of the late Hannah White of Cedarville was filed today. She leaves all her real estate, which is four lots in Cedarville, to the supervisor of Lancaster Township. Wm. Winters is the present supervisor. The above was made on condition that the supervisor take proper care of her and her son Aram Ballinger during their natural lives."

And from April 24, Freeport Daily Bulletin: "George House is no longer in the employ of the Cedarville Creamery company." (I don't know whether George was fired, quit or whether he left town.)

Not all the news in the neighborhood columns was frivolous. The Freeport Daily Bulletin on June 7 reported that "Captain Samuel Buchanan died at his home in Cedarville at 11 o'clock this morning after a long illness. He was 66."

Buchanan, commander of Co. G, 46th Illinois Regt. in the Civil War, suffered a severe wound and never fully recovered.

He was buried in Cedarville Cemetery on June 11. Buses brought the large number of mourners to the ceremony.

By 1900 the soldiers who survived the conflict began to succumb to its lingering effects or old age.
